COAL IN PHIPSBURG, MAINE. - The following is from the men employed in operating on the mine, and was taken by two gentlemen of this city, who were on the spot, and questioned each of the signers minutely, as welas other persons acquainted with the facts, and are satisfied that they are correct; and from those and other indications they are satisfied that the main body of coal will be come to without going very deep.

without going very deep.

Phipsburg, May 19, 1236.

We, the subscribers, who are and have been employed since the commencement of digging and boring for Coal for the Phipsburg Coal Company, certify, that in the fall of 1335, we found in the gravel, on digging down about 15 feet from the surface of the earth, in a vein of water running from the mountain, particles of coal—also, at same time, the vegetable remains. Digging was suspended until April of present year, and in boring about 15 feet further, we came to a strata of coal of about 12 inches in thickness—particles of coal were taken from drill hole, and on being exposed to the fire, burnt freely. By a comparison of this coal with that taken from the bed of the river, it agreed in all respects on fusion. By digging with a long-handled hoe, at low water, coal can be taken any day on the bed of the river, and of a wholly bitu minous character, burning freely and being superior to any coal we ever knew of. We are acquainted with the New Castle and other coals. Whenever there is a heavy ground sea, it is always found after in large quantities of several bushels on the beach, at about the distance of a quarter of a mile to the south of where we are digging for the coal. It has always been found in some way for eighty years, as certified by Mr Daniel Morse, who still lives near the premises, and is 39 years of age. All the old people have found it during their recollection, and they have also heard their fathers say the same since their recollection, which was on the first settlement of this country. This coal on the beach is the seme as that found on the bed of the river. On pumping the water out which had collected in the pit during the winter, it was very offensive, and like bilge water.

We have no doubt that we shall soon strike the main body of coal, and from all appearances, we judge that a large quantity of coal exists beneath the surface.

Moliere and Cimarosa .- Moliere when writing his comedies, used to read his most favorite scenes to his servant-maid Laforet, and he estimated their merit by the impression they produced on her. If she laughed, About six months since I examined Mr Smith's Machine for purifying feathers, and being satisfied that it must produce the effect for which it was intended, I sent a bed to be purified, which had been dried and aired in the ordinary way, by an upholsterer, four times in four successive years, without any lasting effect. The process of Mr Smith's machine upon this bed has proved completely effectual. The bed continues to be in perfect order, and the bulk of the feathers is permanently increased 25 per cent.

He was pleased; and it she was serious, the scene was altered or cancelled. # BOSTON PROBUNG POST.

FRIDAY, JUNE 3, 1836.

The factious purpose of the Whig leaders being "to subvert the power of the proper, and to usurp for themselves the reins of government," their organ, the Atlas, with the same bungling policy as themselves, has set to work and blackguarded the people. To the great amazement of the Atlas, the people have retained their power; and their control over the government has been strengthened by all this abuse. Hartford Convention Federalism and Nullification Whiggery both fie prostrate

What grieved these factions more than any thing else, was the defeat of aristocracy in its very strong-hold—the U. S. Bank. The Northern Federalists, (though they had lost their darling Tariff policy, through the opposition of the Southern Nullifiers,) finding that they had not worked up party spirit to the proper sticking place, welcomed to their ranks these hot-headed enemies of the Union. The Nullifiers, having also failed to rule the people, by threats to imitate the Hartford Convention men, and break up the Union, joined their late enemics on the Bank Question, only because the Bank party was a powerful faction, whose money influence could be brought to bear as a tremendously potent engine of OPPOSI-TION to the constituted authorities chosen by the people.

But the Bank, though clothed with enormous power, under a plausible pretext, also failed "to direct, control, counteract, or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities." Nick Biddle, after the adjournment of Congress, was obliged to confess that he had not been able, even with the aid of panic orators, to produce the least effect on Congress; so he concluded to stop his "simple machine," and work it in another way. The ambitious and unprincipled men, who sought to subvert the power of the people, and usurp for themselves the reins of government, were not cunning enough to effect their purpose, in the first place. Their "fair business transactions" dangled so conspicuously from their pockets, that people were alarmed. They saw the danger of needy politicians controlling the committees of finance. In the next place they had an able tactician to conquer-one equally able to understand the tactics of the people's enemies, whether to be met in the cabinet or in the

Such was the exasperation of the aristocracy at their defeat by the people, whose "huge paws" put them down peaceably at the ballot-box, that ever since their sole policy-OPPOSITION-has been pursued with a dogged spirit, which has grown the more insolent just in proportion as its effect becomes more and more impotent. A subscription paper for the relief of Daniel W. Wood of Nantucket, has been started in that place. Mr. Wood is one of the survivors of the massacre on board the ship Awashonks, at the Sandwich Islands, and the son of a worthy, afflicted and infirm widow, whose reliance on his success in life was among her few remaining hopes. He bears upon his body the effects of five or six terrible wounds, inflicted by whale spades. The Inquirer says-

"The principal wound is not yet healed. It is across his back, eleven inches in length, and three in breadth, extending to the left scapula, a part of which was cut off by the spade, and has since fallen out. The arm on that side is partially deprived of its functions, This wound, which compelled him to lie upon his face nearly three months before his arrival at Oahu, exhibited unequivocal symptoms of mortification; and his messmates, anxious to preserve life, burnt out the gangrenous flesh by means of heated marlin-spikes! And it is yet exceedingly problematical whether even an imperfect recovery may be ultimately accomplished."

Wife or no Wife-Joe or no Joe .- About twelve o'clock on Wednesday night, a carriage drove up to the mouth of Black Dog Alley, in Southack street, and up flew the windows of a certain house, promptly responsive to the well-known rattling of the wheels; but Watchman Foss, being luckily descried peeping round the corner, quick as they flew up, down fell the windows again, and all were hushed as mice. The carriage " freight," however, unconscious of the intimation of danger, unwittingly alighted, and applied, but unsuccessfully, to the door for admittance. The freight aforesaid consisted of a lady and sailor, with the former of whom Foss had, in his official capacity, scraped an acquaintance "long time ago;" and presuming thereupon, he inveigled her and her sailor to the watch house, after the following dialogue took Watch-Miss Pierce, what are you doing down here ? Lady-I and my husband have just come from the Theatre, and have stopped here to see an acquaintance, but the folks have gone to bed. Come Joe, we'll go home. Watch-But stop a minute; when were you married, Nancy ?
